

Sharon King
Deputy Commissioner
Georgia Department of Human Services

Sharon King is the Deputy Commissioner of Programs and Services for the Georgia Department of Human (DHS), overseeing the Department's Divisions of Family and Children Services, Child Support Services, and Aging Services.

Prior to working with DHS, Ms. King served as the Deputy Chief of the Healthcare Facility Regulation Division for the Department of Community Health (DCH). She later became DCH's Deputy General Counsel where she was responsible for providing legal support to the lead agency responsible for health care purchasing, planning and regulation for Georgia, and improving the health outcomes of its citizens. Previous to employment at DCH, Ms. King practiced law in the private sector for several years at Hall, Booth, Slover, and Smith PC. She also served as the General Counsel for the Ridgeview Institute.

Ms. King earned her dual bachelor degrees from Vanderbilt University in electrical and biomedical engineering. She further received her law degree from Mercer University and is a 2009 graduate of Leadership Gwinnett.